WE ASKED THEM TO DO IT

"Our boys offer to give their lives. We are only asked to lend our money."

That is an excerpt from a Victory Loan speech. It was uttered recently. It was said during the Second and the First Victory Loan campaigns. It will likely be repeated in the Loan period next year. How many of us understand that those boys offer their lives because we ask them to do that!

Each one of us has had a share in the decision to fight the Germans, and to send our young men over to do the job.

The men at Dieppe knew it. They stole themselves to jump out of boats onto the bullet-swept beaches because they felt we expected them to do their best for Canada.

If all of us back here in Canada fully realized that fact, how we would hasten to increase our purchases of Victory Loan Bonds!

OVERS NOT TO DIE

Striding bareheaded—his tin hat hanging from his wrist—with a streak of blood across the bridge of his nose, Lieut. Col. G.C.I. Merritt, Canada's first V.C. of the war, has become a symbol of the valor that was Dieppe. He is also a reminder of what lies ahead.

Merritt's background and rise to command of the South Saskatchewan Regiment at 33 make interesting reading, but for a story which really grips the imagination we must turn to the words of Wallace Reyburn, Canadian war correspondent. Reyburn took a notebook to Dieppe and with it survived six and a half hours on the beaches, ramps and streets, and immersion in the English Channel. Yet in his notebook there is no mention of any of Merritt's heroic deeds that day at Dieppe.

"You don't need to make notes about things like that," said Reyburn. "Until the day I die I'll remember every single detail about Merritt at that bridge; Merritt in the street fighting; Merritt on the beaches."

Reyburn first met Merritt on a ship steaming away from the coast of England and had supper with him shortly before zero-hour. He was impressed with Merritt's youth, his big build, his smile and his popularity with his men—men he would have died for. When he next saw Merritt it was ashore.

The excerpts which follow are from a talk given by Reyburn over the C.B.C.

I was with a group of the troops and we came to a bridge that separated the suburb we'd landed in from the main part of Dieppe itself, recalled Reyburn. The bridge was about two hundred yards long—wide—very exposed.

High up on the hill across the river from us was a concrete fort. A huge thing. The Nazis' guns were all trained down onto the bridge—a key point. The river was in flood and that was the only way to get across it—apart from swimming—

I stood behind a house abutting on the bridge—watched the first batch of men try to advance across it. As they stepped forward—they were mown down. Those who were still on their feet started dragging back the fallen, and I dashed out with the stretcher bearers.

As we stood there I caught sight of a figure coming up the road. He was striding with firm, unhurried steps, and his revolver was dangling from his hip. It was Merritt. As he reached us he took his tin hat off and wiped the sweat from his forehead. It was a hot, steamy day.

He asked what the trouble was—and walked back into the middle of the street. He kicked aside some long strands of telephone wires that were hanging from a battered pole. "Now, men," he said, "we're going to get across this bridge. Follow me. Don't bunch up together, spread out. Here we go!" And he strode forward onto the bridge—bareheaded—his tin hat at his wrist.

As I watched him lead his men through that thundering barrage—just once, but six times he went back and forth across that bridge—I felt a quiver run up and down my spine. I'd never seen anything like it before in my life—and I'll probably never see anything like it again. I said: "My God!"

Later—we were all collected near the beach—what was left of the South Saskatchewan and the Winnipeg, Camerons—several hundred men. The enemy knew we were there and trained everything they could muster onto us—Colonel Merritt stood on the pathway directing operations—still bareheaded—a streak of blood across the top of his nose—absolutely erect—as mortar shells crashed down on the houses around us.

Focke-Wulfs came down on us—We could see the tips of their cannon and machine-guns black and hear the whistle of the bullets and cannon shells. Merritt looked up, but didn't as much as duck. He's not afraid of anything—He wasn't being foolhardy. He was sticking to his post—directing his men—

We set off for the beach and as I went I heard Merritt shout: "Don't run, men, shoulder arms and march to the beach!" I saw the man ahead of me pull himself up and shoulder his rifle. I'd been crouching down and I stood up straight and marched with the man beside me.

As the last men were preparing to board those last boats to leave, Colonel Merritt was with them—standing up—bullets flying around him and ricocheting off the rocks at his feet—He got his men off and as the last one or two left he took their Tommy-guns and Bren-guns from them—and headed back towards the town.

As he went he called: "I'm going to get even with these swine for what they've done to my Regiment!" That was the last any of us got back saw of Col. Merritt—his heart out in a German prison camp; perhaps in chains. His courage was too great for death, but he would have accepted it, unflinchingly. We are not being asked to face death, or to be courageous—just to BUY VICTORY BONDS! Surely, our course is clear. Nothing matters now but victory!

It is hard to realize that a man like Merritt of Dieppe is now eating

COTTON AND THE WAR

A cotton operative who recently went to have a look round an exhibition of cotton goods in Manchester told overseas listeners to the BBC's Radio Newsreel what a surprise she'd had.

Although she started to work in a cotton mill at the age of twelve, she'd no idea so many war goods were made of cotton.

"When the war started," she said, "I thought I'd like to go back to the mill to do my bit, but at that time I didn't think of my sort of work as a front-line job. That came afterwards, and today when I saw the uniform, the cotton diving-suits, the special kits for tank crews and all the different kinds of clothing made of cotton that our fighting boys wear, it came over me that the job I'm doing is every bit as important to blow Hitler to bits with—And if you'd told me that those dinghies that have saved the lives of so many air crews were made of rubberized cotton—well I'd never have believed you if I hadn't seen them with my own eyes and felt them with my fingers."

LOST IN POLYCLOT LONDON

Meeting travellers from all over the world is one of the fascinations of London life. Near the Bloomsbury Hotel, where I live, soldiers from countries seem to congregate. The other night in the blackout J.B. McGeachy's father, who is as Scotch as haggis or a Winnipeg policeman, was stopped in that neighborhood by a poor lad from Saskatchewan who had lost his way and who asked him, plaintively: "Excuse me, sir, but do you speak English?" He doesn't, of course, but I think he managed to make his Scots intelligible.

RED CROSS NOTES

The regular monthly meeting of the Executive of the Wainwright and District Branch of the Canadian Red Cross will be held in the Red Cross room, on Monday, November 2nd, at 8:30 p.m.

We are pleased to report that the covered silver platter, donated to the Red Cross some time ago by Mrs. Richard Aykroyd, has been sold by the Red Cross Superfluity Shop in Edmonton, and realized the sum of thirty-five dollars.

Britain's Minister of Economic Warfare, in a recent speech announced that new winter clothing is not obtainable by many people in Britain because large shipments of woolen garments are being made to Russia, where the need is very great. But Britain has been warned to expect heavy bombing this winter. This means night and day duty. After a full day's work, they come home to a rationed meal, and go out to serve as night watchers, air raid wardens, etc., for which warm clothes are needed. In many cities housing conditions are makeshift since these cities were bombed, and coal is strictly rationed. Yet they send to Russia what they need themselves, saying in the words of Sir Philip Sidney "Thy necessity is greater than mine." What are we going to do about it? Are YOU helping the Red Cross to help them?

We gratefully acknowledge receipt of the following:—
2 pillows donated by Rose Willow.
$2.50 donated by Gerald Victory Club, for a Prisoner of War Box (Hong Kong).
$2.00 private donation towards a Prisoner of War Box.

SUGAR BEETS FOR PICKLES

The sugar beet itself has come to the aid of housewives who feel that their table is not complete without the addition of sweet pickles. No sugar is allowed for making sweet pickles under order of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, but the discovery has been made that sugar beets, grated fine, covered with water, boiled for half an hour, strained and the liquid boiled down to half its original volume gives a thick, sweet syrup which is fine for making pickles. The suggestion comes from a member of the Women's Regional Advisory Committee, WRTB in Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, who found the result more satisfactory. A good idea if the home garden has a supply of sugar beets waiting to be used!

Jim Says

IT CAN BE DONE

Jim finds times hard. His standard of living has dropped. There are all these new taxes.

Now there's another Victory Loan and Jim is expected to subscribe.

"Rock bottom!" was Jim's first thought. "We're on rock bottom. Just can't find the money!"

He's thought some more since. And he's decided it can be done. Jim says he doubts if Merritt lost much time wondering if it could be done when he crossed that bridge at Dieppe.

"When the Germans invaded Norway and stabbed the people in the back they said they came to 'defend Norway' not only against the English, but also against every evil in life. That is why we Norwegians ironically call them 'The Salvation Army'."

FARM NOTES

SORE TONGUES IN CATTLE (Experimental Farm News)

To get the most profit out of cattle, it is necessary to keep them comfortable and healthy. Injuries of all sorts should receive prompt attention so that the recovery will be rapid. It is only natural that neglected, sick animals or those suffering from injuries will regain their normal condition slowly and to the extent that recovery is retarded, losses in production or gains will increase.

Mr. J. McPhail, Superintendent, Dominion Experimental Station, Melfort, Sask.

Sore tongues in cattle are much more common than most people realize because the injured part cannot be seen without going to considerable trouble. The tongues of cattle are so formed at the base that barley beads and shunk grass readily lodge there and often become imbedded in the flesh, causing an open sore. When this happens, the animal finds difficulty in eating and is caused much discomfort. Furthermore due to the pain caused when an animal touches an open sore, they are not likely to take salt and their health will suffer further from this deficiency.

It is therefore well to observe the animals carefully to ascertain if they have any difficulty in eating. Those with sore tongues will tend to raise their heads when swallowing. If one is suspected of having a sore in the mouth, grasp it by the nostrils with one hand and pull the tongue out far enough to examine the base. If it is sore, have an assistant clean out the foreign material and apply vasoline. Do this twice weekly until the sore is healed. When grasping the animal by the nostrils be careful not to fill them so that it cannot breathe. If their breath is closed off, they will be very difficult to handle.

FARMERS URGED TO KEEP

ROYAL FLAX FOR SEED

Due to the prevalence of rust in the flax producing areas in Western Canada this year, and the urgent need of greater production of flax to meet the shortage of oil, the Dominion and Provincial Departments of Agriculture urge that all Royal flax, a rust-resistant variety, be kept out of commercial channels and sold as seed.

The Agricultural Supplies Board has agreed to assist in the distribution of Royal flax seed from this year's crop and has appointed a committee as the agency of the Board through which growers may be able to obtain assistance in marketing the seed and so that purchasers may be able to place their orders to get it. Farmers are advised to place their orders without delay with the Dominion Plant Products Division at Winnipeg, Saskatoon or Calgary or the Provincial Departments of Agriculture.

The Agricultural Supplies Board through the Committee will purchase any surplus seed which cannot be distributed locally and will pay up to, but not exceeding, $2.75 per bushel, clean seed basis.

Farmers who have a surplus of seed which they are unable to dispose of locally should advise any of the above offices.

HEALTH

A HEALTH SERVICE OF THE CANADIAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION AND LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES IN CANADA

How to feed the war worker has become an important question in thousands of Canadian homes. Our first suggestion is going to be something you may feel that you, personally, can do nothing about. But don't dismiss it on that account. You alone may feel helpless. But you and your friends, and your friends' friends are public opinion; which can still do plenty.

So the first suggestion is that all war workers in a good sized plant should be sold at cost one good nutritious meal during his working period, whatever that is. Surveys conducted by "Nutrition Services" shows that industrial workers meals served by a plant-operated cafeteria on a no profit basis are far better than those served by concession cafeterias. Agitation by a workers' committee might rectify the situation if it's wrong in your plant.

And another thing, for those very necessary between meal snacks, the best and most telling stimulants are milk fruit juices (and that includes tomato juice) or cocoa — no soft drinks. It is inconceivable that a general demand for milk or fruit juices, in place of soft drinks, would be ignored.

Now if your plant isn't one of the ideal ones—and some of them are, you know—some plants serve the sort of meals mother simply didn't know enough to produce; but if yours isn't one of them you'll have to fall back on the lunch box.

Here are some rules that will make that lunch box meal a proper one.

1. See that it contains these three ingredients: protein, a vegetable (not potato) or fruit and milk. Vegetables, fruit and milk won't give you any trouble. And neither will protein if you remember that our best sources of protein are—meat, fish, eggs, cheese and dried vegetables (like beans).

2. A thermos flask of hot soup or cocoa may just hit the spot. This is purely a matter of taste. The necessity of one hot dish has been shown in recent experiments to be just another superstition. But if your war worker likes one, it obeys rule two, which is palatability.

3. Arrange for the lunch box meal to be as fresh as possible. Don't make it up the night before. And wrap everything carefully in wax paper to prevent drying.

Another tip—be sure your sandwich fillings are moist but not wet. Avoid soggy sandwiches on the one hand and dry ones on the other. Use whole wheat bread.

INDUSTRIAL BATHTUB

That metal war products should need a bath to make them clean for the dirty work they have to perform may seem paradoxical but the durability of any instrument of war is dependent upon the final finish and that finish can only be applied after the metal is thoroughly cleaned of oil and other surface dirt that adheres after the machining operations are over.

In the modern high speed industrial bathtub the cleansing fluid is a chemical called trichlorethylene—trifluoride—according to an article in the September issue of C-I-L Oval. Tons of this chemical solvent are required each month in the cleansing of shell casings alone which Canada is now producing at the rate of over a million a month or approximately 1,400 every hour, 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

SIMPLE STYLES

SAVE MATERIAL

New simplified styles of glass containers for jams, jellies, pickles and marmalades, will now save 3000 tons of sheet metal annually, states the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Restriction will reduce the number of sizes from 20 to 10, and eliminate 134 different styles of containers.

The order applies to glass containers used in commercial canning, preserving and food processing industries, but not to glass products for similar use in the home.

Plain round jars, approved as to style, shape and quality, by the administrator of glass and glass products will be manufactured after the end of 1942.

Famous fighting planes which did their splendid part in the Battle of Dunkirk, Britain and France in the early days of the war, are to play a further role in the war effort of Canada during the current Victory Loan drive.

Fairey Battles, a medium bomber-type, graceful and fast, and each with stirring history in combat, will be placed on display in various centres within No. 1 Training Command of the Royal Canadian Air Force. They will occupy positions in prominent localities in cities and towns and their history will be recorded on placards for the citizens to see. Some of these planes bear the marks of agency bullets and fire.

Coming to Canada for training purposes after their valiant services overseas, these planes for many months have been used to turn out the students training under the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan and in this respect have done yeoman service and have stood up splendidly under the grind of long training hours. For the most part these planes are used at Bombing and Gunnery Schools and these have been supplied by No. 2 Bombing and Gunnery School, at Mossbank, Sask.

Here are the planes, the place where they will be located and brief descriptions of the service:

1. At Calgary—Fairey Battle No. 1777.

This aircraft was used in England on operational work, going across the Channel to France during the first 6 months of the war. It took part in the Battle of France and withdrawal of the Allied Forces through Dunkirk. It was later shipped out to Canada and has been used in Canada for training air observers, air bombers and air gunners for a period of 16 months.

Powered with Rolls-Royce Merlin engine—1050 h.p.

2. At North Battleford—Fairey Battle No. 1765.

This aircraft was used by the R.A.F. in France during the first 6 months of the present war. It saw action against the enemy at that time and during the Battle of Dunkirk. It was dismantled in England, shipped out to Canada and reassembled.

It has been used for training air observers, air bombers and wireless air gunners in Canada for 12 months. Powered with Rolls-Royce Merlin engine—1050 h.p.

3. At Assiniboia—Fairey Battle No. 2002.

This aircraft was used in England for operational work. It took part in the Battle of France and the withdrawal of the allied forces through Dunkirk. Later it was dismantled, shipped out to Canada and assembled. It has been in use in Canada training ing air observers, air gunners and wireless air gunners for 16 months. Powered with a Rolls-Royce Merlin engine—1050 h.p.

4. Similar planes are also available for Moose Jaw, and Swift Current, and are awaiting completion for arrangements by local committees.

CALGARY, ALBERTA—An appeal for ground men to serve with the Royal Canadian Air Force has been issued by Flight Lieutenant J.E. Pugh, M.C. Commanding Officer of No. 2 Recruiting Centre, Calgary.

Men who are accustomed to work with tools and who are familiar with road maintenance are required for general duties on works and buildings. Men up to 60 years of age with home service medical category will be considered in this classification.

A number of standard tradesmen with some training along mechanical lines will be accepted for training in aero engine and air frame work. Other openings for enlistment include "handy men" for work on stations, mending orderlies with four months' previous practical experience and a limited number of standard guards for duties guarding air stations.

MOSSBANK, SASKATCHEWAN.

J.V. Rickard, who previous to his enlistment with the R.C.A.F. worked at Williams Lake, B.C. as a salesman, meteorologist and ranchman, received his air observer badge recently at No. 2 Bombing and Gunnery School, Mossbank, Saskatchewan. Other members of his class were all members of the Royal Air Force training in Canada as members of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

MOSSBANK, SASKATCHEWAN.

Airmen and members of the Women's Division of the R.C.A.F. stationed at No. 2 Bombing and Gunnery School at Mossbank report that this is a grand place to be stationed. Everything possible for entertainment on the station is accorded the men and women in air force blue. One very popular occasion is the fortnightly dance sponsored by the Women's Division. Excellent music, a good floor and careful planning by committees in charge combine to put the event over with a "bang". All agree that each dance is actually better than the previous one.

Where the dollars go that Alberta will subscribe in the Victory Loan campaign will be dramatically illustrated by two concert parties composed of talent from the three armed services which are touring the Province from October 18th through to the close of the Victory Loan drive. Many novel stunts will be brought out the need for more and more dollars to keep the Canadian War Machine at full speed ahead.

One of the dramatizations will be the dressing of an Airman from his boots to full flying kit and each item as it is donned will be priced giving in detail the cost of outfitting one member of crewmen in a modern bomber and again multiplied by the hundreds of bombers participating in present day raids over Nazi Germany the magnitude of the cost of providing for our fighters is brought close to home. Flight Lieutenant C.F. Kearns of No. 1 Service Flying Training School, MacLeod is responsible for the preparation of this particular item on the programme.

Honorable C.G. Power, Canada's Minister for Air, has recently disclosed that British Commonwealth Air Training Plan in Canada travel in training an average distance of 1,376,000 miles per day.

Eighty percent of the airmen who are members of the United Nations' forces on action fronts have trained in Canada, according to a statement received recently by Honorable C.G. Power, Canadian Minister for Air.

Farmers Anxious To Produce

Because of wheat surplus many suggestions and indeed requests are being made to prairie farmers to change from wheat to products more urgently needed by the national emergency.

It is the business of farmers to produce what is needed, and they want to do it, but farmers are not lacking in patriotism if they require clear answers to certain plain questions before they make changes, for by better experience farmers know something about the many things that can hamper their efforts, and about the cost of making changes. Here are the questions:

Can I sell what I produce? How much will be paid for it? When will I be paid for what I raise? Can I be sure of storage space to keep the product until I can market it? Will there be enough labour available to help me with the new crop?

There is not a single business house or industry in Canada that would not ask similar questions and require proper answers if the Government or anyone else were to request them to change their plant over to make something new. While, therefore, it is patriotic for farmers to grow what the war needs, it certainly does not denote any lack of patriotism if farmers try to avoid losing money.

Following factors have tended to decrease supply and increase demand:—Unofficial estimates place Australian wheat production for 1942 at 145,000,000 bushels compared with 170,000,000 bushels production last year.—Drought has reduced Turkey's wheat production for this year well below the pre-war average.—Winter seeding in the Balkans is being delayed by the very condition of the soil.

Following factors have tended to increase supply and decrease demand:—The exportable surplus of wheat in the Argentine is estimated at 171,197,000 bushels, compared with 121,583,000 bushels last year.—The record wheat crop in the U. K. has

Hints for the Household

The recipe calendar for October says "Vitamin-rich fruit juices make ideal party beverages. Try frozen squares of canned unweetened Hawaiian pineapple juice, which is a good source of those important vitamins B1 and C, in tall glasses of well-chilled sweet apple juice. It's a new taste thrill that's hard to beat. Serve it on Halloween with fat brown doughnuts made from enriched white flour and squares of mild or sharp yellow cheese."

Basia Facoul
2 cups cooked, dried Lima
2 cups tomato sauce or strained tomatoes
1 tablespoon chopped onion
1/2 pound spaghetti
6 tablespoons bacon fat
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper

Cook the spaghetti in boiling salted water until soft and drain. Cook the onion in the fat, add tomatoes, Lima and spaghetti.
Ice Cream Sandwich with Peaches
Use eight 1 1/2 inch wedges of sponge cake, allowing two for each serving. Place a slice of brick vanilla ice cream on one wedge and cover with the second, turning so that the narrow end is above the wide end of bottom cake wedge. Top with quick-frozen sliced peaches, just thawed, using one box. Serves 4.

Quick-frozen peaches will thaw in about six hours in the refrigerator. If you want to hurry up the thawing process, take the bag of fruit from the carton and thaw at room temperature in the sealed bag. Remember, when you buy quick-frozen peaches that there's no waste. All months over the top. Serve liberally as main luncheon dish.

Meatless menu starring hot vegetable plates are due for increased popularity this fall when the kiddies are back in school. Then more than ever, their meals must abound in foods that provide energy and protective health essentials and vegetables have long had a reputation for furnishing these elements.

Sunkist Spinach
Clean thoroughly 3 pounds fresh spinach. Place in kettle without water, adding 1/4 cup cooking oil and 1/4 tablespoon salt. Mix thoroughly, cook 8 to 10 minutes. Stir or lift occasionally. Drain and chop. Add 2 tablespoons lemon juice. Serve garnished with lemon quarters. Other sortings was done before preparation for quick-freezing, and each garden segment is perfect.

greens may be cooked by the same method.

For canned spinach, add 3 tablespoons cooking oil to one No. 2 can. Season to taste. Heat thoroughly. Add 2 tablespoons lemon juice when ready to serve. Serves 4.

Harvard Beets
Mix well and boil for 5 minutes the following: 1/4 cup sugar, 1/4 tablespoon cornstarch, 4 tablespoons lemon juice, 1/4 cup water and 2 tablespoons cooking oil. Then add 2 1/2 cups fresh cooked beets or one No. 2 can of diced or shoestring style cut beets. Let stand over a low flame until thoroughly heated.

Green Tinged Orange Fatty Rip
In the early autumn the California Valencia variety of orange has a mysterious change of color which growers call the "Green Tinge Mystery". Strange as it may seem, the oranges that look the least ripe are often juicier and sweeter than the golden globes of Spring and Summer. The Autumn green-tinged orange is a fully ripe orange that was once fully colored, but was allowed to hang on its tree until the sun, or something, removed some of the reddish pigment from the outermost layer of the skin so that the fruit reverted to yellowish green or greenish yellow.

Don't pass by this fruit with the greenish tinge. It is ripe, healthful, filled with necessary vitamins and may be turned at any time into hundreds of healthy dainties like the following:

Chen's Salad Bowl
2 cups orange slices
1/4 cup ham slices
1/4 cup celery pieces
3 cups mixed salad greens; any of the following: lettuce, romaine, watercress, spinach, or chicory
2 hard cooked eggs
1/4 cup Lemon French Dressing
Pimiento
Lightly toss orange slices, ham, celery, and greens together with the dressing. Garnish with additional orange slices, hard cooked egg, and strips of pimiento.

For October Meals and Halloween Parties
Whether you are looking for a novel dessert for a Halloween party or just a new dessert for anytime, here are two seasonable desserts that will provide a perfect ending to any ordinary October dinner of festive party. The latter recipe is excellent for a children's party, as the timely topping will delight the eye and the nutritious dessert will please the palate.

Lemon Rennet-Custard Cranberry Whip
1 package lemon rennet powder
1 pint milk, not canned
Make rennet-custard according to directions on package. Chill. Serve with topping made as follows: Whip 1 egg white until stiff. Add 3 tablespoons sugar and juice of 1/2 lemon with 1/3 cup cranberry jelly. Add a few drops of red food color.

"Now WE hold a Mortgage on Canada Ma!"

"Sure we're working harder than ever—but that never hurt, anybody. We're working longer hours and putting our money away in Victory Bonds. Now we'll be paid interest instead of paying it."

"When peace comes we'll have money saved to buy new equipment for our farm—might even put up a new barn—maybe take a holiday!"

"Meanwhile, we can't think of any safer or better place to invest our money than in bonds backed by our country. And we can't think of any better purpose than helping our fighting boys get the jump on the enemy. When we read about our lads bombing Germany, we can think that maybe we raised one of those bombs on our own farm."

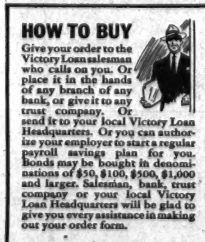

"So that's our plan from now until peace comes. We will work to save and lend. We'll have it to spend later. And we can look forward to getting that new tractor and that fine new automobile we're saving for now."

"We'll be laying up for ourselves the best of all investments—VICTORY BONDS—backed by all the resources of the Dominion of Canada: they yield a fair rate of interest; we can borrow against them; and they are readily saleable when we need cash!"

125th Milestone Reached By Canada's Oldest Bank

Bank of Montreal Started Branch Banking System Gave Canada First Real Money

In Wainwright Nearly 35 Years

Canada's oldest banking institution—the Bank of Montreal—will next Tuesday (Nov. 3rd) observe the completion of 125 years of service to the people of Canada. Founded in 1817, half a century before Confederation, the bank is today a nationwide institution with branches from coast to coast.

When the Bank of Montreal came into being a century and a quarter

Helped Organize Trading

Besides providing a medium of exchange such as had hitherto been lacking, the bank served along the early enterprises of the country and did much to straighten out the difficulties of international as well as interurban trading.

In the achievement of this, one of the most important factors was the creation of the branch banking system, which was a part of the bank's policy from its inception. It had established itself in modest rented premises only two weeks when it opened an agency at Quebec city. Eight months later, in June of 1818, agents were appointed in Upper Canada at trade—industries which formed the only basis of the export business of the country.

Thus it was everywhere throughout the country. As the years went on and settlement spread out, the bank opened branches to facilitate the agricultural development of the country, its manufacturing industries and its general commerce.

Pioneering Spirit
Since those pioneering days when the bank's officers travelled from branch to branch "at first safe opportunity", as old records say, to the modern times of 1942, when travel by train and airplane has made journeys a matter of hours when formerly they occupied several days, the history of the Bank of Montreal copiously demonstrates the pioneering spirit of Canada's bankers.

Today, the bank has hundreds of branches throughout Canada and Newfoundland and its own offices in London, New York, Chicago and San Francisco. The size of its capital and reserves at $76,000,000 today stand in sharp contrast to the corresponding figure of a century and a quarter ago when the bank began business with a capital of $350,000. Perhaps a more graphic indication of the bank's growth and the assistance it has rendered toward the development of the country is the fact that it now has more than a million deposit accounts—about one in every four in the Dominion.

Bank's Special War-Time Services

At the time of the bank's 100th anniversary in 1917, Canada was at war. Today, as the bank passes its 125th milestone, Canada is again at war. Under the stress of war conditions, the institution with its resources, its 125 years' experience and its nationwide system of branches, is playing its part in the nation's war effort, just as it did 25 years ago. In hundreds of communities great and small, the bank is working with Canadian industry and agriculture by furnishing credit and many essential banking and financial services. Further, it is aiding the government by promoting Victory Loan campaigns by the sale of war savings stamps and certificates and in other war activities.

Just as the Bank has served the people of Canada without fail since its foundation in 1817, so for 34 years its Wainwright office has endeavored to work for the advancement of this community. By reason of the services it has rendered to the people and business interests of Wainwright, the Bank has aided materially in the growth of the town and the development of its trade and industry.

YOUTH EXCHANGE

"After the war we must see to it that ample opportunities are provided for our young people to visit other countries, and for the youth of those countries to come and visit us. We must break down by personal contact the barriers of nationality which tend to separate us from those like us in other nations. We must create a common sense and understanding which will stimulate the invention of new forms of international agreement upon which we may base a lasting peace."

FIRST REAL CANADIAN MONEY

Canada's first dollar bills were issued by the Bank of Montreal which began business in 1817. Up to that time, only foreign currencies were in circulation in Canada, and as the country had no money of its own, most domestic business was done by barter.

The illustration on the $2 bill is believed to represent one of the steamboats belonging to the Honourable John Molson, that plied on the St. Lawrence at that time. Mr. Molson, who was the most outstanding merchant of Montreal in the early part of the nineteenth century, was president of the Bank of Montreal from 1826 to 1834.

Kingston, which was then important as a garrison town, and at York, as Toronto was then known, which, with a population of 1,000, was an outpost for lumbering and the fur

Canada's First Real Money

At that time, Canada had no currency of its own, and not only American, British and French, but Spanish and Portuguese money was in circulation. Naturally, the ratios of exchange into colonial money of account were subject to frequent variations, and as a consequence, domestic trade was carried on principally by barter, and international business was on a very unstable basis.

It was in an endeavor to overcome these chaotic conditions that nine Montreal merchants banded themselves together to establish the Bank of Montreal. Opening its doors on November 3rd, 1817, the young bank immediately set about the business of giving some semblance of organization to the financial life of the country, and its first task was the issue of paper currency—that is, the bank's own bills in small denominations—later, copper coins. Specimens of this currency—which was in reality the first Canadian money—are preserved in the bank's museum in Montreal.

TRANSPORTATION TRIUMPH—A BANKING ACHIEVEMENT

This picture shows that the Hon. Donald A. Smith, vice-president of the Bank of Montreal, driving in, at Craigellachie, B.C., in November, 1885, the golden spike to complete the line of Canada's first transcontinental railway—The Canadian Pacific. Effectively sealing the Confederation of 1867 by a continuous ribbon of steel from Montreal to Vancouver, the undertaking was made possible through the financial backing of the Bank of Montreal from the start.

Through this support, the pioneer railway builders were able to overcome what appeared to be insuperable obstacles and to complete a project that has been recognized as being the most important in the opening-up and development of Canada's West.

Donald Smith, who was later knighted and finally elevated to the peerage to become Lord Strathcona, was elected president of the Bank of Montreal in 1887 and honorary president in 1906.

Willing Hostages

'For Hitler'

"I was one of the twelve hostages taken by the Germans after Warsaw ceased its heroic resistance. On the night of October 8th, I was taken out of my bed and led to the city hall. There I found all the other hostages. German soldiers were at the door. "So they have taken us," we said to each other. We were sure that we were going to be shot. Somehow during the day we found out that Hitler was in Warsaw. Now we understood. We were going to die if something should happen to Hitler. But all the same we hoped "something" would happen—we were willing to pay the price."—From "Polish Invasion" by Rosemary Jellis.

FIFTH COLUMN DIPLOMACY

"One cannot strictly speaking, talk of Nazi 'diplomacy' at all, Hitler and his agents all over the world have sought to gain their ends, not by negotiation, which is the method of diplomacy, but by false promises, intimidation, blackmail, exploitation of other men's difficulties and inflammation of their internal differences through the medium of secret paid agents. His corps of fifth columnists have been much more important to him than his corps of diplomats."—B.B.C. broadcast.
